Vote for dinner in five seconds. Get a shopping list that makes sense. Your cook gets clear instructions — every day, automatically.

For flatmates with a cook · Bengaluru pilot

Dinner is a full-time job nobody signed up for

- Every evening, someone has to decide what's for dinner — again
- Flatmates aren't cooks, so nobody actually knows what a dish needs to shop for it
- Instructions to the cook get lost between three WhatsApp chats and a language gap
- Now do that every day, every week, for as long as you live together

Vote in 5 seconds. Get the exact shopping list. Your cook gets clear instructions in their language — automatically,
every day.

— what FlatMeal does

Vote, shop, dispatch — the daily loop

1

Vote

Three dishes show up on your phone every morning. Tap the one you want — takes five seconds.

2

Shop

The winning dish turns into a shopping list, scaled to exactly how many people are eating tonight.

3

Dispatch

Your cook gets clear instructions on WhatsApp, in their own language, automatically at dispatch time.

Today: three dishes, one tap

- Three curated options each morning, already filtered for your flat's diets and allergies
- Tap to vote — see who else has voted, in real time, no debate needed
- An "I'm out today" toggle keeps the headcount honest without a group message
- No votes by close time? A sensible pick still goes out — dinner never stalls

The grocery list writes itself

Vegetables

2 medium onions, 1 bunch spinach

Dairy

200 g paneer, 1 small packet curd

Staples

Check you have: turmeric, jeera, garam masala

Other

Nothing else needed tonight

Scaled to headcount automatically. Tick off what's already in the kitchen — the rest is your buy list, one tap to share on WhatsApp.

Your cook gets it, in their language

DRAFTED IN ENGLISH

Hi Ramesh, cook dinner for 3 people tonight: Palak Paneer. Spinach, paneer, and onions are in the kitchen. Keep it less spicy today.

SENT ON WHATSAPP, IN HINDI

नमस्ते रमेश, आज रात 3 लोगों के लिए खाना बनाना है: पालक पनीर। पालक, पनीर और प्याज़ रसोई में रखे हैं। आज कम मसाला रखिए।

Translated automatically at dispatch time. If delivery fails, the same message opens as a WhatsApp share link — no flatmate has to type it out.

Built for real flat life

Diets & allergies

Veg, vegetarian, non-veg, Jain — plus allergy tags that act as a hard veto, no exceptions.

Cook's language

Hindi, Kannada, or English — switch it any time, takes effect on the next message.

"I'm out today"

One toggle keeps headcount honest, no group-chat message needed.

No votes, no problem

Zero votes by close time still names a winner, so dinner never stalls.

What we're watching in the pilot

60%

average daily vote participation, after week 1

80%

of cook messages rated "understood, no follow-up call"

50%

of winning meals use the in-app grocery list

5+

flats still active (4+ polls/week) in week 4

Four weeks to a working pilot

Longest lead-time item — WhatsApp template approval — is submitted week 1 and never blocks the build; a manual share fallback ships regardless.
